Solar return

This opening section gives you the outline of the year, and the sections that follow develop each part of it. The first months carry the softer contacts from Uranus and Neptune, spring brings the structural pressure of Saturn, and eclipses touch the chart in February and August. Your solar return places the weight of the year on your public role.

The transits come first, and section 3 follows each of them. Saturn is in square to your natal Midheaven (MC), exact on 31 March 2027 with Saturn direct. This contact speaks most directly about career, reputation and direction, and it asks you to separate what is solid from what you only assumed. Neptune is in conjunction with your natal Venus, exact on 3 March 2027, and in trine to your natal Moon, exact on 4 March, both with Neptune direct. Together they bring a dreamy, idealistic tone to love, taste and mood, and they reward slow decisions and honest agreements. Uranus is in sextile to your natal Moon, exact on 4 December 2026 with Uranus retrograde on that pass, and again on 12 April 2027 with Uranus direct. This gives a light, supportive current of change in your emotional life, easy to miss unless you say yes to the small invitation.

Section 4 turns to your secondary progressions, the slower inner timeline. The progressed Sun stays in Gemini in your first house all period, keeping curiosity and conversation at the centre of how you present yourself. The progressed Moon moves from Cancer in the third house into Cancer in the fourth, shifting the emotional focus from daily exchange toward home and belonging. Within that movement the progressed Moon makes four contacts: a sextile to your Sun, exact on 5 December 2026; a sextile to your Ascendant, exact on 17 February 2027; an opposition to your Midheaven, exact on 30 May 2027; and a sextile to your Mercury, exact on 26 June 2027. They read as a sequence, from an aligned start, through easier self-presentation, to a question of balance between public and private life, and then to words for it.

Section 5 describes your solar return, cast for 30 April 2027 at 12:50. Its Ascendant is Leo and its Midheaven is Taurus, with the Sun in Taurus in the tenth house. That combination points the year toward career and standing, carried by a warm, visible Leo manner. Mars and Jupiter both stand near the Ascendant, so energy and confidence are strongly marked, while the Moon in Aquarius in the seventh house keeps partnerships in view.

Section 6 follows the eclipses, which touch your chart four times. On 6 February 2027 an annular solar eclipse in Aquarius, in your 11th house, squares your natal Mercury and is conjunct your natal Lilith. On 20 February 2027 a penumbral lunar eclipse in Virgo, in your 5th house, squares your natal Saturn. On 2 August 2027 a total solar eclipse in Leo, in your 5th house, squares your natal Sun, stands in opposition to your natal Neptune and squares your natal Ascendant. On 17 August 2027 a penumbral lunar eclipse in Aquarius, in your 11th house, is conjunct your natal Uranus. The two solar eclipses and the August lunar eclipse share the Leo-Aquarius axis, while the February lunar eclipse belongs to the Virgo-Pisces axis.

Finally, section 7 takes the year month by month and places each exact date in order, so you can see where these threads meet. The overall character is a year of mixed texture: softness and structure side by side, with your work and public direction as the steady centre.

How this report is calculated

This report covers the year from 1 December 2026 to 30 November 2027. Everything in it is calculated from your birth chart and the movements of the planets across that stretch of time, using Swiss Ephemeris, the same ephemeris that professional astrologers rely on for precise planetary positions.

All dates are given in the local time of your birthplace. The same applies to the solar return, which is cast for your place of birth. A date you read here is the moment a contact becomes exact in that local time, so you can read each date as it stands without converting it.

The main part of the report follows the transits of the slow planets: Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, Neptune and Pluto. Each is measured against the points of your natal chart and listed by its exact aspect: conjunction, sextile, square, trine or opposition. Slow planets are chosen because their contacts last for weeks and shape the character of a whole period, while the faster planets pass through in days and belong to a calendar rather than to the story of a year. When a planet moves retrograde and crosses the same natal point again, every pass is shown separately, and each is marked as retrograde where it applies, so you can see a single contact return more than once.

Alongside the transits, the report uses secondary progressions, a technique in which each day after birth stands for one year of life. Your birth time is known, so the progressed Moon is included together with the progressed Sun. These are slower, inner movements that describe the background mood of the year rather than its dated moments.

The solar return chart is a map cast for the exact moment the Sun returns to its natal position, here for your birthplace. It gives a portrait of the year as a whole, with its own Ascendant, its own houses and its own emphasis. The eclipses of the period are included as well, solar and lunar, wherever they touch a sensitive point in your chart.

SAMPLE

Houses are calculated in the Placidus system. Because your birth time is known, the houses and angles of your chart are fixed with confidence, and the Ascendant and Midheaven can be used as working points throughout.

Your natal chart in brief: the Sun is in Taurus, the Moon is in Leo, and the Ascendant is in Taurus. A Taurus Sun and a Taurus Ascendant together give the chart a steady, grounded base, a preference for pace, substance and what can be built over time. The Leo Moon adds warmth and a need to express yourself openly and to be seen in what you do. Each section that follows reads the movements of the year against this foundation.

The slow planets of the year

The slow planets set the long background of your year, and in this period they speak through a handful of contacts to your natal chart. Some were already exact before the period opens and simply continue; others reach exactness on dates ahead. Taken in order of their dates, they show a year that begins with softened edges and gentle support, moves through a stretch of structural pressure in spring, and settles into a broad Jupiter window in the autumn.

Start with the contacts that were already exact before the period and carry into it. Uranus is in sextile to your natal Moon and to your natal Venus, and both contacts are exact twice in this period: on 4 December 2026 and 5 December 2026 respectively, with Uranus retrograde on those passes, and again on 12 April 2027 with Uranus direct. Because the planet touches each point, moves away and returns, this reads as a wave rather than a single moment. The sextile from Uranus to your Moon makes it easier to refresh your emotional life. You may feel lighter about change, more open to new kinds of closeness, or ready to arrange your home in a way that suits you better. Friends and unexpected conversations can lift your mood. The sextile to Venus adds a spark to your social and creative side: invitations, playful plans, a change of style, or a different kind of evening with someone you already know well. The support in both cases is light, which is why it is easy to let it slip past. The practical use is to say yes to the small invitation, try the new routine, and clear out the corner of your life that has been feeling stale, while the contact is still active.

Neptune adds a softer layer to the same early months. Neptune is in conjunction with your natal Venus, exact on 3 March 2027 with Neptune direct, and in trine to your natal Moon, exact on 4 March 2027, also direct. Both were already exact before the period began, so they are not starting here; they are in the middle of their work, and the March dates are the moments each one is exact within this period. A Neptune conjunction to Venus tends to bring romance, idealism and artistic inspiration. You may feel drawn to beauty, music and dreamy connections, and relationships can take on a more spiritual quality. The challenge belongs to Neptune's nature: people and situations may look the way you wish them to be rather than the way they are. Enjoy the softness, give things time to show their real shape, keep communication honest and agreements practical, and notice how your ideals shape your spending and your choices.

SAMPLE

The trine from Neptune to your Moon sits close to this and colours your emotional climate in a gentler way. A trine joins signs of one element, and here it gives a sense of ease: emotional softness and intuitive understanding tend to grow, you may feel closer to loved ones, to nature or to creative work, and caring for others can come easily. Home may become a place of comfort and inspiration. Simple habits such as music, journaling or time near water can help you make the most of this flow. Since Neptune dissolves edges, the sensible companion to all of this is slower decision-making. When something feels deeply right, write it down, confirm the details and let a trusted person hear it before you commit. Inspiration can run high under Neptune, and practical clarity can lag behind it, so give the clarity time to arrive.

Saturn's contacts here include a square to your natal North Node and a square to your natal Midheaven. The first is Saturn in square to your natal North Node, exact on 22 December 2026 with Saturn direct, and already exact before this period. Duty and personal growth can seem at odds while Saturn squares your natal Nodes. Familiar roles may demand more of you, while the direction you want to grow in feels harder to reach. This is a time to see which responsibilities truly belong to you and which are simply habits. Reduce obligations that hold you back and take small, steady steps in the direction you want instead of waiting for a perfect moment.

The second Saturn contact is the heavier one in structural terms: Saturn in square to your natal Midheaven, exact on 31 March 2027 with Saturn direct. Career demands and private life can press against each other when Saturn squares the Midheaven. Work may require more of you, while home and family also need attention. Obstacles in your public role may test your resolve. Saturn's transits ask what is solid and what was only assumed to be, and at the Midheaven that question lands on your direction, your reputation and the way you are seen. This is a period to clarify priorities and adjust your course where needed. Make realistic plans, set boundaries, and put your effort into achievements that will still matter later. Work done under Saturn tends to last because it rests on honest effort rather than hope. The pace may feel slower and the responsibility heavier, but the pressure has a purpose: it shows what needs commitment, what needs repair and what you are ready to stop carrying. Choose a few real priorities, keep a steady rhythm, and accept that progress may be quiet before it becomes visible.

Jupiter's contacts begin with a square to your natal Mercury, exact on 20 March 2027 with Jupiter retrograde on that pass, and again on 6 May 2027 with Jupiter direct. It was already exact before this period, so it is a contact in progress with two exact passes inside the period. Under a square from Jupiter to your Mercury, the mind runs ahead of the details. You may take in too much information, agree to too many plans, or overstate a point in a discussion. Big-picture thinking is strong, but the fine print is easy to miss. This contact is useful for brainstorming and for arguing your case, and less useful for signing in a hurry. Read documents twice, check facts before you share them, and leave room in your schedule so that commitments do not pile up. The two passes give you a second look at the same theme: whatever you rushed in March can be revisited and tidied by May. It also sits alongside the Saturn square to your Midheaven on 31 March, so the weeks around that date carry both the call for realism and a mind inclined to take on too much, a combination that rewards writing things down and choosing fewer, better commitments.

Midyear brings a different Jupiter contact: Jupiter in square to your natal Saturn, exact on 31 July 2027 with Jupiter direct. A square from Jupiter to Saturn sets the urge to expand against the need for caution. You may feel pulled between a new opportunity and existing duties, or between faith and doubt. The tension is useful because it asks you to grow in a way that can actually last. Both extremes, reckless leaps and frozen refusal, work against you. Before committing to something bigger, make a realistic plan, check your resources and decide what you are willing to give up. Given that Saturn has already been the theme of the spring through its square to your Midheaven, this July contact feels like a continuation of the same conversation from another angle: how much can you take on, and what will hold.

Then the character of the year shifts, because Jupiter forms a run of trines to the most visible parts of your chart. The first is Jupiter in trine to your natal Sun, exact on 10 September 2027 with Jupiter direct. Few contacts are as easy to work with as a trine from Jupiter to the Sun. Confidence comes more naturally, people tend to respond warmly, and plans that reflect who you are have a better chance of moving forward. Because it feels comfortable, this contact can pass without much happening unless you use it on purpose. Put your name forward, ask for the thing you have been postponing, or start a project that lets you show your strengths to the people who matter.

Next in the sequence of dates comes Jupiter in trine to your natal Ascendant, exact on 24 September 2027, also direct. This supports how you meet the world. First impressions tend to go well, new contacts come more easily, and you may carry a lighter, more confident presence. It is a helpful stretch for interviews, introductions, short trips and starting something visible. The support is quiet, so it pays to place yourself in situations where meeting people can lead somewhere, and to follow up on the conversations that spark interest.

Then, on 26 September 2027, Jupiter in square to your natal Jupiter is exact, with Jupiter direct. It is a checkpoint in your growth cycle, and its position among the trines is worth noticing. Plans and beliefs that seemed right may now meet reality, and you may feel the need to adjust your direction, your philosophy or the scale of your ambitions. Some opportunities may look appealing while pulling you off course. The square is a moment to review what is working, drop commitments that only inflate your schedule, and recommit to the aims that still feel true to you. It sits between the Ascendant trine and the Midheaven trine, so the openness of those contacts is best used with this sense of proportion: say yes to the openings that fit your aim, and let the others go.

The last of these is Jupiter in trine to your natal Midheaven, exact on 13 October 2027 with Jupiter direct. With Jupiter in trine to the Midheaven, your work and reputation receive steady support. Efforts tend to be noticed, contacts can help your career, and decisions about direction feel clearer. The help may come quietly, through a recommendation or a timely chance. Make use of it by updating your professional profile, asking for feedback from people whose judgement you trust, or putting forward a proposal you have been preparing. Set beside the Saturn square to your Midheaven in March, this autumn trine offers the same area of life a very different tone: the spring asks what is solid, and the autumn gives the solid work room to be seen.

SAMPLE

Read as a whole, the pattern is easy to hold in mind. The early months combine Uranus and Neptune contacts to your Moon and Venus, which favour softness, fresh company and creative experiment, with Saturn's square to the North Node asking you to sort real duties from habits. Spring concentrates the heavier work: Neptune's exact dates on 3 and 4 March, Jupiter's square to Mercury on 20 March, Saturn's square to the Midheaven on 31 March, Uranus again on 12 April and Jupiter again on 6 May. Midyear brings the square from Jupiter to Saturn on 31 July as a question of scale. And from September into October, Jupiter's trines to the Sun, the Ascendant and the Midheaven, with the square to its own natal place between them, bring the year a broad opening.

The useful way to work with all of this is to match your effort to the character of each stretch. Use the early support from Uranus to refresh your emotional life and your circle. Treat the spring as a time for realism, tidy agreements and a short list of priorities. Treat the summer as a moment to weigh ambition against capacity. And when the autumn trines arrive, act on them deliberately, since support that feels comfortable is the easiest kind to let go unused.
